Welcome to the 2013 Feminisms and Rhetorics conference!

This event marks the ninth biennial gathering, which began at Oregon State University in 1997 and caught fire that year, leading to subsequent meetings at the University of Minnesota, Millikan University, Ohio State University, Michigan Technological University, the University of Arkansas, Michigan State University, and the University of Minnesota, Mankato. We at Stanford are delighted to join in keeping this tradition alive and well.

This year’s conference brings together scholars from all over the United States as well countries from all over the world to consider links that we have forged—and can continue to forge—across cultures and languages, disciplinary fields, and modes of communication, all in the service of putting rhetoric and feminism into productive conversation and engagement.

Thank you for joining us and for contributing your scholarly work to this ongoing project. Thanks too to all those who have organized this conference including, Christine Alfano, Mandy Benson, Chris Bourg, Shay Brawn, Karli Cerankowski, Cristina Huerta, Jared Hoffman, Faith Kazmi, Alyssa O’Brien, Regina Reynolds, Sigrid Streit, Mattie Taormina, and Zach Waggoner.

And finally, thank you to the co-sponsors and friends who have helped support Feminisms and Rhetorics 2013: The Program in Writing & Rhetoric, Vice Provost of Undergraduate Education, School of Humanities & Science, Women’s Community Center, The Clayman Institute, the Program in Feminist, Gender, and Sexuality Studies, Stanford Library Special Collections, the Hume Center for Writing and Speaking, Norton Press, and Bedford St. Martin’s Press.

Session J 5:30-8:00 Evening Reception with Lynda Barry (Faculty Club)

Lynda Barry has been a “must read” for feminists for decades, ever since she began her thirty-year run of Ernie Pook’s Comeek (which Drawn and Quarterly Press plans to issue in a new multi-volume collection). In this strip, as well as in her 1988 “The Good Times Are Killing Me” and her 1999 “Cruddy,” readers enter the world of childhood and adolescence that is so tellingly explored in her 2002 classic, One! Hundred! Demons! The first of her works in color, One Hundred Demons and subsequent volumes such as What It Is (2008) and Picture This (2010) are awash in shimmering, sometimes dayglo watercolor.
(In an interview, Barry said that she “wanted it to look like Fruit Loops and sparkle paint.”) She has received many awards, including the Eisner Award for What It Is and the R. R. Donnelly Award for highest literary achievement by a Wisconsin author. A consummate teacher of drawing and writing, Barry’s recent books have made her renowned workshops available to everyone, and everyone, she insists, can be—and should be—an artist.

At the age of five, Lynda moved with her family to Seattle, where they lived with five Filipino families, using sheets to divide the space up. Hers was a childhood she says she doesn’t like to talk about much, one reason perhaps that she went out on her own when she was quite young, working as a janitor in a hospital and saving to go to college at nearby Evergreen State. Her friendship with Matt Groening, creator of “Life in Hell” and The Simpsons started there, when he published some of her work in the school newspaper. She began to think of herself as a “real true” cartoonist, she says, when The Chicago Reader picked up her comic strip and agreed to pay her the huge sum of $80 a week. Today, Lynda lives on a dairy farm in Wisconsin where she works on new projects and has recently served as Artist in Residence at the University of Wisconsin. In a 2009 appearance at Stanford, she spoke to the entire incoming class, who greeted her with a standing ovation and endless cheers. We are delighted that she is joining us again at the 2013 Feminisms and Rhetorics Conference.

SESSION O: 4:15-5:30

O1, FEATURED PANEL: GENERATIONS OF TITLE IX  (OAK WEST)

Kelly Belanger, Toni Kokenis, Judy Sweet, and Tara VanDerveer

Judy Sweet served as Director of Athletics at the University of California, San Diego from 1975 (the first woman in the nation to direct a combined men’s and women's intercollegiate athletics program) until 2000. From 2001-2006, Judy was NCAA Senior Vice-President for Championships and Education Services and Senior Woman Administrator. Since that time she has been a consultant for several universities and organizations on gender equity, leadership and educational programs. Judy has extensive experience with NCAA governance committees and was elected to a two-year term as membership President of the NCAA in January 1991, the only woman to have served in that position. Judy has also served in leadership positions for many local, state, and national committees and boards of directors.
In a storied 34-year coaching career, Setsuko Ishiyama, Director of Women's Basketball and Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame Class of 2011 member Tara VanDerveer has established herself as one of the top coaches in the history of both collegiate and international women's basketball. Regarded in the profession as one of the most well-respected and dynamic coaches in the country, VanDerveer was inducted to the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame in Springfield, Mass. in August 2011. In 2002, she was inducted into the Women's Basketball Hall of Fame in Knoxville, Tenn. An ambassador for both Stanford University and the sport of college basketball, VanDerveer has enjoyed an unprecedented level of success through an energetic and positive approach to the game. A 15-time conference coach of the year (13 Pac-12, two Big Ten), VanDerveer has accumulated an impressive 894-203 (.815) record over her 34-year career.

Kelly Belanger is an Associate Professor in the Virginia Tech English Department. Her research interests include literacy studies, oral history and other field research methods, professional communication, and the rhetoric of social change movements, including discourses surrounding gender equality in education and athletics, racial justice, educational reform, and medical/health communication. As director of the Center for Studies of Rhetoric Society, she is especially interested in making rhetorical studies accessible for public, nonacademic audiences and in studying ways to facilitate successful communication, across social, cultural, political, and philosophical differences. In addition to her publications on activism and literacy, Belanger's forthcoming book is called Invisible Seasons: Spartan Hoops and the Rhetoric of Title IX.

Toni Kokenis is a member of the Stanford University Women's basketball team pursuing bachelor degrees in Human Biology and Sociology. This past summer she worked as an undergraduate RA for the Clayman Institute for Gender Research collecting interviews for their LGBT Oral History Project. As president and co-founder of the university's athlete-ally student group, she and other founders worked alongside the Athletic Department to help produce the University's "You Can Play" video to fight homophobia and transphobia in Stanford athletics. She is currently working on an honors thesis in Feminist, Gender, and Sexuality Studies to examine negative recruiting in Division I Women's College Basketball.

SESSION P 6:00-8:00  EVENING RECEPTION WITH DOROTHY ALLISON

(ALUMNI CENTER)

Dorothy Allison grew up in Greenville, South Carolina, the first child of a fifteen-year-old unwed mother who worked as a waitress. Now living in Northern California with her partner Alix and her teenage son, Wolf Michael, she describes herself as a feminist, a working class story teller, a Southern expatriate, a sometime poet and a happily born-again Californian. The first member of her family to graduate from high school, Allison attended Florida Presbyterian college on a National Merit Scholarship and studied anthropology at the New School for Social Research. An award winning editor for Quest, Conditions, and Outlook—early feminist and Lesbian & Gay journals, Allison’s chapbook of poetry, The Women Who Hate Me, was published with Long Haul Press in 1983. Her short story collection,
Trash (Firebrand, 1988) won two Lambda Literary Awards and the American Library Association Prize for Lesbian and Gay Writing. Allison says that the early Feminist movement changed her life. "It was like opening your eyes under water. It hurt, but suddenly everything that had been dark and mysterious became visible and open to change." Allison received mainstream recognition with her novel Bastard Out of Carolina, (1992) a finalist for the 1992 National Book Award. The novel won the Ferro Grumley prize, an ALA Award for Lesbian and Gay Writing, became a best seller, and an award-winning movie. Cavedweller (1998) became a national bestseller, NY Times Notable book of the year, finalist for the Lillian Smith prize, and an ALA prize winner. Awarded the 2007 Robert Penn Warren Award for Fiction, Allison is a member of the board of the Fellowship of Southern Writers. A novel, She Who, is forthcoming.
